MEDICINAL.

SHE DON'T WANT TO TELL
—what made her beautiful.
Yet it's only what other women know. Wealth of beauty comes only with a healthy body. Health is a set of good habits. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription assists nature in establishing these habits. Women have yellow faces, dull eyes and hollow cheeks, together with low spirits, when they are made miserable with disorders, derangements and weaknesses peculiar to their sex. Health is regained after periods of nervous prostration and excitement, or other manifestations of derangement of the womanly organs, when the "Prescription" is used. Besides, it is a tonic to the system. The proprietors take no money.

It is guaranteed to benefit or cure all the diseases, disorders, and weaknesses of women, or money is refunded.

Cure is cured by Dr. Sage's Remedy.

DENTISTRY.

VERY BEST

IS IT WISE?

Is it wise to dismiss an uninvestigated statement by saying, "It isn't possible?" Is it?

People sneered at Fulton, laughed at Morse, pushed Edison. They think that good dentistry is necessarily high-priced, but the ocean steamer is here, the telegraph and the phonograph, so is "scientific dentistry at moderate prices."

My name is Bity Pelton. I had two brothers. We were born on a farm in Virginia. My master named us "Catch'em," "Bity'em" and "Kill'em."

"Catch'em" and "Kill'em" he gave away, and my name has always been called "Bity." I am said to be a very handsome dog—my color being a sort of seal color, with white fore-feet, which my master calls hands. I have also a white breast, which he calls a shirt bosom, and I have soft, silky ears, and eyes just the color of my coat.

As I always sleep in a blanket in cold weather, in a little bed by the side of my master's, I keep my coat very soft and shiny. My master sometimes calls me "Little Shiny," I look so pretty, he says.

I hope my readers will not think me vain. I only wish you to know just how I look, and I am quite sure that much of my good looks is owing to the care I receive, and my good home. I know if I was half-starved and knocked about as I see some poor creatures, both in town and here in the country, I should lose all my good looks, for nothing keeps a person in good spirits and gives him a proper degree of self-respect which will always cause him to try at least to look well like plenty of good victuals. Indeed, I have heard my master say that "good victuals and a good fire were the two great things in life." I know very well that I appreciate both, for when I go to town on a wet day I am so glad to get home and get warmed and fed. I go to town with my master always, running all the way, that I may go into the woods and find rabbits. My mistress would tell you that I find a great many, but I seldom catch any—they do run so fast; and if I catch one and kill it, I can only eat a little of it at once, and if I bury it "Dandy" (a neighbor's dog) or "poor Frank" (our colored man's dog) is sure to find it, so I have given up catching them. I like to chase them, but I am contented to let our big white cat "Hop Pelton" get them. He brings them in, as big as himself, and then he is quite uncomfortable, then he leaves the rest for the other cats—"Fou" and "Baby." I like to chase him, too, for he will run, but that "Fou," although she is very small, she won't run. She stands and faces me, and if I go too near she strikes at me with her claws, which are as sharp as needles. Then my mistress says—

"Gite Pelton," don't you hurt my 'Fonsy'."

My mistress and mistress are very fond of pets. My master is particularly fond of his horses, while my mistress pets everything on the place. She has some little chickens, "Matta," "Speckle" and "Blackey" which she puts to bed every night in a nest of leaves, with a rabbit skin in it to keep their feet warm. The old hen-mother left them. Two little pigs have just come to the farm. She named them "Jack" and "Jill," and says they are "real cunning." I thought at first they were "possums," and would have tried to catch them, had not my master told me better.

But I must tell you about my birthday. I was four years old last Fourth of July. My master said he thought it was quite time that some notice was taken of the birthdays of such a good little dog as Bity Pelton.

So then we began to think of a birthday party.

"But who shall we invite?" said my mistress. "Dandy" is gone away. It is hardly proper to ask "Frank" to come, and you know Bity don't like the cat.

"Invite ourselves," said my master. So it was settled. The day came, bright and beautiful. I went all over the farm, as usual, to see that all was right. Then I sat down on the hill and looked off on the river, and watched the boats going down crowded with people and bedecked with flags and streamers. I could hear the bands playing, too, and all this made me very happy.

I began to think how very thankful I should be for my pleasant home, how good I would be to the cats (I even made up my mind that I would not chase them any more), how much more watchful I would be of the farm and the animals, and then I must have fallen asleep, for the next thing I remember was hearing my mistress say that dinner was ready.

Now I never go into the dining room until the family are through eating. I know this, by hearing my master push back his chair. I then go and he always gives me something nice, which he has saved for me on his plate. This time I went as usual, and I saw a beautiful birthday cake with four little flags in it—that was mine, to do just as I pleased with. So after we had each had a piece, then I began to think what was to be done with the remainder.

My mistress said she thought we ought to take some of it to the little colored children who live in the cabin by the river.

So she cut four nice pieces, and put a flag in each, then she placed a plate with nuts and candies, and we went to the cabin. How pleased the children were! There were just as many as I had lived years. They waved their little flags, and laughed at the idea of a dog having a birthday cake. But my mistress said:

"Bity is a good little dog, and does all that he knows how to do. He is very kind-hearted." And to me she said, as we came back, "Now I am sure you will be glad that you made those little children so happy. Always remember this, that whenever you have any pleasure yourself, try and have some one share it with you. In that way it will be to others a blessing."—Mrs. Annie M. Pelton.
